The death of a white female infant, aged five months, was found in a field near the German church, Hollidaysburg, on Wednesday afternoon last. No clue to the murderer.

His distinction true and vital. The mildness, humility, and personal suavity of his character were such, that he seemed to realize with Massillon, the great Bishop of Clermont, "that the pleasure of doing good is the greatest of pleasures."

Altoona Sun says that there are two engineers, twin brothers, running between this city and Pittsburgh whom it is difficult for any one to distinguish apart. All such we know long ago, but then we were not energetic sufficient to itemize them. Of course they are both what you call "clever fellows."

DEATH OF BISHOP O'CONNOR.—Rev. M. O'Conor, S. J., late Catholic Bishop of this Diocese, died at Woodstock College, near Baltimore, at fifteen minutes before 7 o'clock on Friday, August 15, 1872, in Rome, where he had been for more than a year, which he bore with surprising patience and truly Christian resignation.

Bishop O'Conor was born in the vicinity of the city of Cork, Ireland, February, 1810, and was sent to the College of the Propaganda, Rome, at an early age, from which he passed with the highest honors, and of whom it was said by the late Cardinal Wiseman, he was the "bright, particular star."

He came to Pittsburgh as Vicar General in the year 1841. He was consecrated Bishop August 15, 1843, in Rome, whither he had gone to join the Jesuit order. He brought with him to this country, in December of the same year, a community of the Sisters of Mercy, now spread over the United States, and some years afterwards, the Order of Passionists. Upon the establishment of the Diocese of Erie, in 1853, he was transferred there at his own request, but returned to Pittsburgh at the instance of the Holy See, in 1854, which he continued until his resignation in June, 1859.

He established the first successful hospital in Pittsburgh in 1846, which he placed in charge of the Sisters of Mercy. He also founded a Theological Seminary, which was very dear to his heart, and which was not forgotten during his years of retirement. The Pittsburgh Post, in commenting on his death, says: "Not alone among those of his own religious faith, but among those of all faiths, his passing away" will be heard with unaffected sorrow, but among many of our older citizens will his name be remembered for his noble qualities, his vast learning, his boundless charity, and his elevated Christian character.

His distinction true and vital. The mildness, humility, and personal suavity of his character were such, that he seemed to realize with Massillon, the great Bishop of Clermont, "that the pleasure of doing good is the greatest of pleasures."

As a scholar he was an ornament to literature; as a citizen he illustrated all the civic virtues; as a Bishop he was the pride of the Episcopate. But his greatest glory was his "Good Shepherd"—the friend of the poor, the father of the fatherless, the promoter of education, and the exemplar and expounder of the Gospel. His character was marked by his glorious resignation. Called away after an eventful and well spent life, we but imperfectly reach the opinions of those who knew him, when we say:

How mourned by all the good! Blessed will be his memory! His death was a loss to the Church and to the world. He was a man in form and mind and soul. As few who wear the shape deserve the name; and his great title to that generous claim was his fidelity to the cause of the weak and oppressed. His heart and his hand were ever open to the poor and the suffering.

THE DEATH-KNELL SOUNDED.—Michael Moore's Days Numbered—Desperate Conduct of the Prisoner—The Sheriff Forced to Shoot and Wound Him Twice in Succession.—The death warrant of Michael Moore, the unfortunate wretch whose fearful crime of wife murder has been the subject of so much still fresh in the minds of our readers, was received by Sheriff Bonacker on Saturday last. That warrant fixes Wednesday, Nov. 27th, as the day for the execution, and as the Sheriff was only awaiting the arrival of the document in order to take the place of the prisoner on Monday last, and another cell properly fitted for his reception, and there he now is, chained by one leg to the floor. The desire of the Sheriff to remove Moore was not forgotten of any particular ear, and it is not strange that for some time aware that the prisoner was making futile efforts to dig a hole through the jail wall, which he concealed from view by the aid of his bed-tick, but because he felt that every precaution should be taken to secure him, he determined upon the best plan finally determined upon.

Local Correspondence. ALTOONA, Oct. 23, 1872. Friend McPike—I extend to you the sympathies of my heart in the loss of your mother. I trust that you will find it truly remarkable. To stand by the death-bed of a mother!—when the last breath is caught up by the angels of God and registered in Heaven—a pledge of immortality of which a solemn and impressive moment! The mother—she whose love guarded us; whose hand guided us; whose kindness developed the good powers of our nature, whose smile was a vigil in our behalf! And while the falling leaves, the chilly winds, and the cheerless earth reminds us of the certainty that we must all die, and that the time of time—your mother has been called to a land where leaves never wither, where the brightness of day reigns through eternity, where we are given to the angels, and where we are given to them that sorrow. Requiescat in pace.

This plain, open fact stares us in the face at every turn we make. SOCIETY IS DEARLY CORRUPT! Men sell their souls for gain! Wallow their fellows for gain! Murder, dark, damning and bloody, perjury, and every crime known and unknown—crimes that would make the devil blush—stare us forever in the face! No office, trust or condition is exempt! Everywhere in our city the fever of crime rises up, until the stench is almost beyond endurance! And now one of the officials of our city stands charged before the public with crimes and misdemeanors which would make the most famous public offender upon him and cast his good name to the winds. A committee has been appointed by Councils to investigate the charges, and it remains to be seen whether or not they can be established. Truly may we be alarmed.

The Good Will ball, which took place in the Opera House on the 17th inst., was a grand success. Very Rev. Father Tuigg, pastor of St. John's Catholic congregation here, left yesterday for Baltimore to attend the funeral of the much-loved Bishop O'Conor, which takes place to-day in that city. Mr. Stephen Burley is the name of the person who has been elected to the office of Mayor of this city, instead of "Buckley," as printed in my last letter.

AMERICAN Working People. GEORGE HUNTLEY has just put up for us a heating pipe attachment, and invited the Sheriff to see it. He was induced by Mr. Myers to succumb to his fate, and walking out of his cell, permitted the latter gentleman to take him in charge and conduct him to the other cell. Here, after being securely placed in irons, the Sheriff was ready to shoot him, but he realized his terrible position, and he who has a right to know his best is hopeful that God in his mercy will pardon the poor wretch. To all which every humane heart will say amen.

BOLD ROBBERY IN ALTOONA.—The following letter furnishes an account of one of the boldest and most daring robberies we have heard of for many a day. It occurred in Altoona on Tuesday evening last: One of the most daring robberies ever committed in this city was perpetrated in C. C. Shannon's jewelry store, corner 11th and 14th streets, on Tuesday evening last. Mr. Shannon was at his supper, and while there was no person in the store but one of the clerks, a man entered and desired to look at some fine gold watches, and while turning around to pick up a piece of cambric, the fellow grabbed the watches, bounded through the door, and escaped. Mr. Shannon was not seen until the first dark alley, and in the twinkling of an eye was non est inventus. As soon as the clerk recovered from his astonishment he gave the alarm and chase was made, but without success. At present writing no clue to the thief has been obtained. Mr. Shannon estimates his loss at about $400. Yours, &c., A. WARD.
